BUDDHA BAR LONDON

Model Amber Le Bon and designer Matthew Williamson (below left and right) are Buddha Bar fans. The stylish restaurant (main and bottom) is spread over two floors

WHAT IS IT?

After the success of the widely acclaimed Parisian restaurant, the newly opened Buddha Bar London has become one of the city's most stylish pan-Asian restaurants, fusing Eastern cuisine with Western tastes.

WHO GOES?

Amber Le Bon, Bryan Ferry, Edie Campbell, Kimberly Wyatt, Savannah Miller, Matthew Williamson, Poppy Delevingne, Zoe Hardman and Phil Clifton.

WHY DO WE LIKE IT?

We loved escaping into a world of Eastern glamour at Buddha Bar. One of the first things OK! noticed when we arrived was the sheer size of the restaurant, which is spread over two floors, and the clever design and dim lighting creates a feeling of intimacy. With David Begbie's huge steel mesh Buddha overlooking our table, we were taken to a place a million miles away from everyday life – and that's before we even got to experience the food! OK! decided to go for a selection of 'Buddha Bites', a brand new set lunch menu full of light Pan-Asian dishes. The chilli salt crispy squid, one of the restaurant's signature dishes, is a mouth-watering must-have. We'll definitely be coming back for more.

WHAT ELSE?

Buddha Bar is renowned for its live music, played by DJs who carefully mix electro-style rhythms and ethnic and tribal sounds with all-time favourites. Brilliant!

Our girl ABOUT TOWN

OK! lifestyle editor Natalie Posner shares her whirlwind diary

This week I headed to the Painted Lady hair salon in Shoreditch for the launch of Lipcote's new partnership with the Stroke Association and Style For Stroke. Sipping prosecco, I spoke to the fabulous Zoe Hardman, who was cooing over the salon owner's baby. She told me whenever she sees a baby, it makes her want one! I feel the same – I just need a boyfriend first. Maybe I should apply to go on Take Me Out!

I was also invited to the 45th anniversary party of Mr Chow in Knightsbridge and, knowing it's Simon Cowell's favourite restaurant, I guessed there would be celebs galore. But nothing prepared me for bumping into the mighty Bruce Willis while having a cocktail beforehand at the Mandarin Oriental Hyde Park Hotel. He was kicking back after attending the premiere of his movie A Good Day To Die Hard – where was my invite? Neither Bruce or Simon made it to Mr Chow, but I did mingle with Holly Candy, Sadie Frost and Tamara Beckwith, who were tucking into lobster rolls and fiery beef fillet on skewers, washed down with champagne, naturally.
